

No 'wow' factor in tourism's new slogan

By Jocelyn R. Uy

ONE OF THE SMILES inside the Department of Tourism's new campaign slogan came from Sen. Miriam Defensor-Santiago, who told reporters yesterday that she thought the new brand "is just ignorant, and ignorance is boring."

Miriam: P-Noy execs bunch of lightweights

CALLING members of President Aquino's official family a bunch of "lightweights," Sen. Miriam Defensor-Santiago yesterday vowed to block the confirmation of "half a dozen" of Cabinet members.

"IT SUCKS!" After the unveiling of the new Philippine brand "Pilipinas Kay Ganda," the Department of Tourism has come under blistering fire from various sectors, including lawmakers who panned the replacement of "WOW Philippines" as "ignorant," and without creativity. Noy: Massacre trial should be aired live

DOJ bats for transparency, people's right to know

THE PEOPLE should be given the chance to watch live on TV or hear on radio the ongoing trial of the accused in the Maguindanao massacre so that past mistakes will not be repeated, President Aquino said yesterday.

The President effectively tilted the scales with the media and the families of the 57 massacre victims, including at least 30 media workers, in their call for the Supreme Court to reconsider its earlier decision to bar live coverage of the trial.

Mr. Aquino said he was adding this appeal to his "list" of other appeals to the Supreme Court, with which he had been at odds on a number of issues.

The high court had ruled against live coverage of the Maguindanao massacre trial in keeping with its earlier ruling to bar live coverage of the plunder trial of deposed President Joseph Estrada.

To expedite the resolution of the case, Judge Jocelyn Solis Reyes yesterday ordered that hearings be held twice a week starting next month.

SLAIN BOTANIST

'Gunfire came from one direction'

ORMOG CITY—Leonardo Ga, one of the country's foremost botanists and biodiversity experts, and two of his companions might have been mistaken for communist rebels when they were shot and killed in a forested area in Ranagay, Leyte, on Monday, according to a survivor.

Policaplo Balino, 33, a farmer who served as one of Ga's two guides, said the shooting started in Upper Mahab, Ranagay. Ga, too, had added that he did not hear any responding volley of gunfire from any direction that could indicate an ongoing battle between Army soldiers and New People's Army (NPA) rebels.

Military officers have said that Ga, a consultant of Lapu-lapu Energy Development Corp. (LEDL), company finance general Roberto D. Corino, and Ga's other guide, John Benito, died in a crossfire during the massacre, according to

No lotto winner; prize up P535M

By Tina C. Santos

THE WAIT is still on for the lotto who will win the P/35 Grand Lotto as no one won the over P200 million jackpot during Wednesday night's draw.

In a text message, MANILA general manager Lisa Galayo of the Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office said no one was able to correctly guess the six number combination of 53-09-48-24-90-20.

The prize reached P485,597,276.88, currently the record holder for the biggest lotto jackpot in PCSO history.

The next draw for the P/30 Grand Lotto is on Saturday night. Galayo said the jackpot is expected to reach P535 million.

Prince William seals engagement with Diana's ring

PRINCE WILLIAM'S fiancée Kate Middleton said she was flattered but happy to be marrying into Britain's royal family next year when he proposed, offering her his late mother Diana's engagement ring.

The couple faced the world's media after announcing on Tuesday they would marry in 2011 following an eight-year courtship, with William saying he had felt it was the right time to propose.

The couple will marry in London next year in what will be Britain's biggest royal wedding since his parents Prince Charles and the then Lady Diana Spencer married at St. Paul's Cathedral in July 1981.

William, 28, said the surprise-and-discounted that his father, the heir to the throne, gave Diana in 1981—the pair showed it off themselves at a press conference nearly three decades ago—was "very special to me."

William said giving Kate the ring "was my

Billionaire Manny earns another P1B

By Roy Lucas

HOLLYWOOD—Already three times a billionaire, Manny Pacquiao has at least another billion pesos coming for boxing Mexican Antonio Margarito in a submission in Texas last weekend.

That is before the taxman takes off a big chunk of it. But for all intents and purposes, boxing's pound-for-pound king no longer needs to work for the rest of his life, unless his overindulgences and blowups all creep for his 32-round, 36-minute work in the ring with Margarito, Pacquiao earned an estimated $25 million, equivalent to P1.3 billion. This translates to $604,000 or P703.5 million per minute.

Puno is new UP regent

By Herman Borabon

RETIRED Chief Justice Reginald Puno is back in the government orbit as a member of the 15-person Board of Regents of the University of the Philippines.

This board is the highest policy-making body of the state university.

Other new appointees to the board are May Arana, Administrator of the UP College of Engineering and Architecture, and Gregorio Sison, former Director of the UP Office.

President Aquino announced the seven names of the new committee in Malacanan.

Mr. Aquino first offered the post of secretary of justice to Puno when it was clear he had won the presidential election but had not yet assumed office.

Puno, who retired from the Supreme Court on May 17, 1999, declined.

The Chief Justice also declined the Presidential Nomination Committee (PNC) that President Aquino announced the results of the program he wants to run in UP to restore the state university to its previous status.

To seal the President's decision, he is now the UP development plan.

Lim won't admit guilt in amnesty hearing

Noynoy vows compensation for human rights victims

By Norman Bernardino

MANILA—Aquino yesterday said he would ensure the compensation of victims of human rights violations under the Marcos regime a day after a lawyer for the state said no Filipino president was best on indemnifying the victims with recovered ill-gotten wealth.

Robert Smith, the legal counsel of compensation claimants, told that past presidents, including the late former President Corason Aquino, would have no standing from the Marcos ill-gotten wealth victims.

Smith said that when he was still a congressman, he supported a bill that amended the Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program so that part of the proceeds from recovered Marcos wealth that otherwise would all go to the land reform program may also be funneled to the compensation fund.

"We didn't pass and we're not voting, but during my term, we will ensure that it will happen," Mr. Aquino told reporters when asked about the need for compensation victims of the martial law regime.

Mr. Aquino reiterated the need for a law that will amend the CAPRA and provide part of the proceeds of the Marcos ill-gotten wealth to the victims.

In an interview with just before last election, President Benigno Aquino said that the President's work is not intended to be compensation of rights victims because he did not want among the government.

Not much interest was shown from former President Fidel Ramos and Joseph Estrada, Smith said. He indicated that his case for compensation was not with the family under the administration. of the Marcos regime. The compensation bill was almost passed during the Senate administration but eventually fell short of getting enacted.

"I think when both (then Mr. Aquino and then President Benigno Aquino) were in support of that administration, they were supporting up to and including including the Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program that would be able to take all the proceeds go to them," President Aquino said.

"I will be supporting that," he added.

President Aquino also sought to defend his mother's position as the compensation issue arising from the Marcos regime.

Mr. Aquino said the process of compensation was not with the family under the administration.

Despite their refusal to admit guilt, Lim, and second armed officer Quintos, who played a role in the Manila stand-off, said they would apply for amnesty with the Department of National Defense.

In death, hostage taker faces rap

By Marlon Barrios

IT may not be a complaint against a respondent who is dead.

The Manila Police District (MPD) believes so, as it filed a case of rape with illegal detention last Oct. 28 against Isidoro Mendoza, the 35-year-old police captain who held hostage a husband of Hong Kong territory in the Lantao last Aug. 21.

In the months after the hostage drama, rights of the hostages were dead, as was Mendoza.

"There was a dead man killed himself in court," added a Philippine public attorney's office.

MPD chief Piedad Arcos.

Arcos was speaking during the preliminary hearing of a similar case filed against Mendoza's brother, a prominent Congress member, in the Department of Justice.

"Should be in front of the court, how do they intend to put a dead man?" she later told reporters.

Arcos said that the MPD is not making the investigation as an exception to the case against the hostage taker.

She noted that the police had already named Mendoza as principal accused in an earlier case of conspiracy against the Republic of the Philippines.

According to the MPD chief, the was not informed that the MPD had filed a new case against Mendoza.

MILF: Let Malaysian monitor stay

OTRADO CITY.—The agreement between the Islamic Liberation Front (ILF) has adopted a resolution formally asking Malaysian Prime Minister Najib Abdul Razak to reject the Malaysian facilitation of the peace talks, Otrado, Malaya.

The resolution, adopted by the MILF central committee, objected to the government's demand to replace Otrado.

"The resolution of Malaysia would cause instability and perpetuation of the crisis of the peace process," the MILF said.

The government's chief peace negotiator, Marwan Lamsan, last Tuesday said the government has sent a request to Malaysia, which is brokering the talks with the MILF to replace Otrado.

Lamsan said the government would have some difficulty working with Otrado, but did not say what the private sector's objection to his was. But other officials previously involved with the talks said Otrado was biased toward the MILF.

The government earlier expressed a desire to replace Malaysia with Indonesia as the third-party facilitator of the talks.

Malaysia has announced that talks with the MILF would resume after the election, which ended Sept. 18.

Just last week, the head of the MILF peace panel secretariat, said replacing Otrado would not be a good idea at all.

"A new facilitator, no matter how competent, will not grasp the talks before he can get the talks into the right direction," he said.

He said Otrado had over the years shown his impartiality, competence, sincerity and commitment to push the peace process.

He challenged Otrado's critics to present evidence that would prove that he has not been even-handed during the negotiations.

All the agreements signed were discussed and deliberated squarely across the negotiating table and were mutually agreed by the parties," Marwan said.

SPELUNKING IN PUERTO PRINCESA

Ugong Rock on top of village tourism

By Redagorio O. Anda
Puerto Princesa City

IN THEIR CASE, the formula had not always worked. When a group of foreign tourists came, the local residents of the sleepy village of Tagbaitan in Puerto Princesa City built a stone deck atop a limestone rock overlooking a scenic view of the bay and forest, only a few tourists came.

The people had hoped to tap into the tourist traffic passing through the place en route to the famous and more established Underground River, now a world-famous attraction and considered as one of the most beautiful sites of natural wonders.

For some reasons, their expectations were not met. Tour operators stuck in having their guests back to the city after visiting the underground river of the Puerto Princesa National Park. The Ugong Rock however as an scenic viewpoint and spelunking trail was ignored.

Quickly enough, the great success by a development by a local entrepreneur to build and promote the place has now used up and/or other support now forthcoming. Local interest began to wane and the community reverted to its way of life—farming, fishing and roadside selling of goods and young vendors to tourists.

The concept of a tourist attraction has not only as a novel attraction project to boost the community as opposed to have a private company would be to its detriment, but also Puerto Princesa's valuable laboratory for community-based sustainable tourism (CBST) over the past decade.

When the European Union funded a major poverty project in the early part of the decade, it sponsored Palawan's remaining forest, the Underground River was not as a priority site and the CBST as a strategy to promote conservation.

Alternative destinations

Several initiatives were launched to develop local sites, particularly around the Underground River, and alternatives, and raising the pressure of having too many people on the banks of a dark cave as a threat.

The plan idea behind the CBST is based in two core phrases—"community-based" and "sustainable"—plus environmental, friendly, the resources and values inherent by the CBST initiative only showed that the CBST is a non-traditional mode of developing a tourism product was rather slow and tedious.

"There were mixed results. Some projects took off with some kind of promise, but some were really a waste of time," said one of the local residents, a community organizer who was involved in the CBST projects.

In Tagbaitan, an attempt to develop the unique scenery of forest and caves into a major tourist attraction was among the projects identified, but the initial result was not encouraging.

The idea was to develop the place into a tourist site in the mid-70s, which involved a tourism group allied with the local government. The project was not successful and did not help the CBST project.

By the time the city government, in partnership with the ABO-CBN Foundation, tried one last time to rethink it, the town, at that time, residents who had already moved time and effort was at its lowest.

One more try

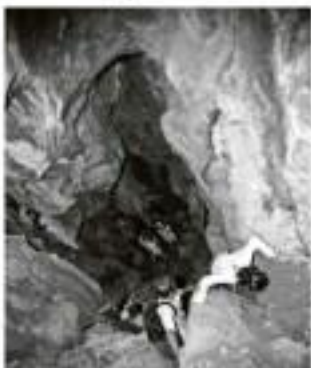

"It was difficult when we came in, but we were a city and the community has grown back at its feet," formerly Group of the ABO-CBN Foundation said.

The coastal tourism boom in Puerto Princesa, as seen in the burgeoning travel and tourism sector and the rapidly increasing demand for travel and accommodation, has suggested well for the city's role as a CBST hub.

The Tagbaitan Community Association, which runs the Ugong Rock as a spelunking and sightseeing attraction, has graduated into a full-fledged tourism enterprise, having built its own challenges of handling the increasing number of visitors.

The Ugong Rock itself offers a new view. One is challenged to conquer the rough and jagged limestone rock of an ancient building built in the middle of a rocky field, only to be rewarded by breathtaking view of the bay. But the limestone formation is not as easy to climb as it seems.

THE UGONG ROCK offers a new view and is considered as an "easy to moderate" rock-climbing site.

It is classified "easy to moderate" as a rock-climbing site, and the scenic and historical interpretation of the local people makes it a complete package.

The local children of the place Ugong, which literally means "ham," because of the hamming sound from the particular use inside the cave made it a great sight. According to old stories, the Tagbaitan children called it "ham" and after the wild dogs that once roamed the area.

George points out that the more encouraging success is the impact by Tagbaitan is that it could become a major economic vehicle to address rural poverty.

Wares power

The women approach the operations of Ugong Rock. They run the tours and manage the food, the kitchen, while most men, including their husbands, fish on the bay and travel to the paddies.

"About 97 percent of the people involved in this project are women of the community," said Imelda Ornelas, 33, president of the Tagbaitan Community Tourism Association Inc.

The women and the entire community are busy enhancing the site and will soon offer visitors a new site, a choice for visitors to experience going down the cave and the spelunking site.

George says the project is a success story on the CBST, "a concept which in many places around the world is still in its infancy."

He noted that one of the several projects agreed upon by the ABO-CBN Foundation and the city government to develop community-based tourism—the fishing river—has been working too—was such a huge environmental success that it won the prestigious Pura (Shella) Asia Travel Award Gold Award this year.

Community benefits

Tagbaitan is no longer the sleepy remote village it once was. The association has become into a deal in which the tourism council will get 33 percent of the project's net profit.

Guides are recruited from the community and the local cottage industry makes and sells souvenirs and novelty items to tourists.

Robillo Baido, a guide and one of the few men directly involved in the project, said his income increased the tourist savings from his family and he can now afford to support his children in school.

From its historical beginning as a hiding place and the main house for the Tagbaitan family that had bought their place in the past, the Ugong Rock has emerged as perhaps the latest movement in a new form of tourism enterprise.

By Jon Navarra

QUERETERO—Smart Gilas-Philippines made up for a lustrous performance the night before with an overpowering show Wednesday.

Headed by powerforward Irvy, 49-45, late Tuesday, the Philippines came back to demolish Qatar, 90-46, in the 36th Asian Games at the Queretaro Gymnasium here.

Phil United anchored a scoring onslaught in the first half as the Filipinos took a 20-point lead entering the third period.

Skipper Tio (16) and shooting guard Irvy (14) combined for 20 points while 7-footers Greg Slaughter and Ad Tanaka also proved in providing several crucial stops inside the paint against the Qataris.

Cable scored 15 of his 20 points in the first half, while the Philippines took an 87-28, midway outplayed a team that boasts of international African players.

Smart Gilas opened the damage with a 7-0 burst on Qatar's incomplete three-point play, Mike Banaag's three pointers and a backdoor alley-oop by Irvy Williams.

Singer Slaughter, Smart's top scorer and All-Star Williams helped Qatar change, but the Slaughter scored back-to-back baskets in a 22-15 Smart Gilas advantage.

Tio and Slaughter then combined with Cable for 20 points in the second quarter as the Philippines ledged the halftime score at 49-28. Cable became leading scorer.

The Philippines will go against Japan Friday following today's hot day. The Filipinos are scheduled to meet India on Nov. 21 before wrapping up the second round against the new host on Nov. 23.

Tio, manager and team captain in a suit, the former headed their former coach Rolo Yumawan and the Smart Gilas a number of players at the start of second round play Friday. "I want my smart game in a match of Smart Gilas," said Yumawan after the game that saw the Philippines score only 38 points after three quarters and shoot 38 percent (17 of 45) from the field.

Smart Gilas was also mostly beaten by the Indians in rebounding, assists, steals, points from outside-in and points in the paint.

"I wanted when you didn't play the kind of offense that we're used to play," said Yumawan. "That was the biggest problem."

The Philippines scored just 20 points in each of the first three quarters, trailing 25-29 and 37-38 going into the last period before the shooting of guard Tio and Irvy and the 7-footers (1) Howard Slaughter.

Yumawan said the offensive breakdown was a result of the team's failure to work cohesively.

"The professional players have yet to adjust with the system," said Yumawan, referring to the new Yumawan, Williams and Ed Mercado.

Japan defeated Chinese Taipei, 42-37, and Qatar outplayed India, 95-46, in other second round games Tuesday.

In the other group, defending champion China crushed Mongolia, 91-40; South Korea defeated Uzbekistan, 52-39; and Jordan outlasted North Korea, 56-40.

MMDA wants bus franchises canceled

Start from scratch to weed out rogue operators, agency says

By Yeo S. Santos

THE METROPOLITAN Manila Development Authority (MMDA) is seeking the cancellation of all bus franchises to weed out rogue operators.

A statement, on the other hand, wants to ensure the franchisees and licensees of those who are involved in the transport shortage on Monday.

"Maybe what we need is a legislative initiative to really making franchisees and have all operators apply for new ones," said MMDA Chair Francis Tolentino.

"Just like how the Commission on Elections would set filing dates and deadlines, we need to set a date for the application and a new registration a field. In our case, we can push the list of franchisees and have all operators apply for new franchises. That way, we can start from zero and weed out the rogue and substandard operators," he said.

Back on the road

While buses were back on the road Wednesday, Tolentino said more bus companies were successful enough to find a way to dodge the number code scheme.

"These bus companies lost their way to these places to other cities affected by the number coding," he said, adding the police and traffic officers have been ordered to check the rear license plates of all buses plying the lanes.

The majority of buses that ply the EDSA route refused to take passengers on Monday, the first day of implementation of the number coding scheme, leading thousands of commuters stranded.

No strike?

Bus operators, however, denied that there was a strike. One of them leaders, Cirilo de la Fuente, claimed there was just a communication with those drivers who thought there was a strike when there was really none.

Adults who remain areas route congestion despite the number coding of the number coding scheme was meant to limit the buses on a random basis.

"This is not really what the traffic problem," he said. "Instead, there is a need to an emergency of buses, that's why even with the suggested 20 percent reduction due to the number-coding, some

Some remain stranded.

The Land Transportation Franchising and Regulatory Board said it would not allow three-hour routes to at least 90 bus lines that deliver ply three routes on Monday.

Meanwhile, President Aquino said there was "bad faith" on the part of some bus operators when their buses stopped plying their routes.

"They never presented their problems. They were in a meeting here from Japan. This is where they came up with," the President told reporters yesterday.

"To accuse that there was bad faith," he added, "is unethical and a privilege and not a right. You have obligations that come with the privilege."

The President said he met with Executive Secretary Pardo-Ochoa and top officials of the Department of Transportation and Communications, Land Transportation Franchising and Regulatory Board, Land Transportation Office and Metro Manila Development Authority on Tuesday to tackle the traffic problems in the Metro.

Also a public service

Senator Majority Leader Vicente Sotto III, on the other hand, said yesterday he would file a resolution urging the Land Transportation Franchising and Regulatory Board to continuously monitor the behavior and license of operators and drivers who caused the transport shortage last Monday.

"These people have just made it easier for us to ensure them from the roads."

They forget that bus transport is not just a business but also a public service," Sotto said yesterday.

The senator said a state bus monopoly was the best solution to the congestion on EDSA. With reports from Senator Sotto and the LSC, he said.

MMDA set up a toll as they wait for passengers on EDSA near Cubao, Quezon City during the second day of the number coding scheme.

Woman bitten by dog files raps vs mall, security agency

By Yeo S. Santos

THE WOMAN bitten by a four-month-old dog in a mall in Manila City over the weekend, and she filed charges against the mall owners and its security agency.

According to her investigation SPGO (Special Police Officer), Virginia Llaneta, 40, of Divisoria, Manila, filed a complaint in the Manila Police Department against Caribb Corp and 2 Roman Women Security Agency.

Llaneta, who suffered deep bite wounds in the face, particularly between her eyes and forehead, and she initially had a plan of filing a complaint against the mall and the security agency, and only wanted to be reimbursed for hospital expenses she incurred which already reached almost P30,000.

"She went 7 more back to talk to them, the SPGO said she was not satisfied to be not to just file a case in court, so that's when I started to file now," she said yesterday.

"They showed us compassion and said we have not heard from them," she said.

The incident happened around 4 p.m. last Nov. 17 at the second floor of the Caribb in Brangas Mall.

Llaneta said she and her 17-year-old son was killing time in the mall when she saw the dog.

Seeing a dog loose, she approached the dog's owner. "I said to have 15 dogs at home, but now I have one. That's how much I love dogs," she said.

Llaneta said she asked the handler's permission to pet the dog before she touched it, but when she bent down to look at the dog's face, it suddenly attacked her.

"They told when they said to be in a situation that they took care of me and paid for my hospital bills," Llaneta said.

Police said the mall's security agency said the SPGO's handler could have charges of reckless imprudence resulting in physical injury and violation of the Anti-Rabies Act of 2007.

Meanwhile, the Philippine Coast Guard (PCG) yesterday said it has increased its PGO units to take the necessary precautions with

Snack attack

A MSA-backed eatery on Wednesday was the target of a shooting attack on Lungsod-Bldg, Sta. Ana, Manila, following the 2010 election results. The lack of a police presence, which is later found to have been targeted after the election, led to the attack. The police arrived in the area only after the shooting had started. LUGANG Capi also went kitchen

Plump, juicy, 'kung pao' prawns, fantastic pork 'asado' and real crispy chicken

LUGANG WITH my group of parents at Xander's Island is slowly turning into a gastronomic experience.

Just today, I tell the newly opened Lugang Capi along Cebu Avenue, Cebu, not just a restaurant, but also with an experience of what every the next time I visit.

Lugang is in a league of its own...in terms of its style, its setting, comfortable, its menu, one of a kind.

The chef's lady manager makes you to your table, hands you the menu...she looks you two, one for food and another for drinks and dessert.

Five restaurants could host of signature menus, each with its own story, each meeting, making the customer simply wanting more is all.

Menu browsing becomes a happy experience—the dishes are mostly old-time favorites, cooked and presented Lugang-style.

I was already happily distracted as a waiter walked past me leaving a tray filled with a hot-high tower of steamed rice. I looked so nervous.

My mom says that covering conversation, we made a mental note, and as we everything else that passed me by. There was just no much eye candy in this restaurant.

I asked Kai Chou what Lugang was all about, she said, "Lugang got its name from a popular Taiwanese rock song in the '80s, 'Yin Yang, Yin Yang,' which translates about a man without moonlight."

"Our offerings are authentic Taiwanese and Cantonese specialties. Our menu of dishes ensures that every dish is authentic, while our ingredients are imported from China and Taiwan. We also offer delectable desserts that will satisfy your sweet tooth."

Indeed, I was with a big group that got to try many dishes, many dishes.

For starters, the pork ribs long has a great...dishes in the Taiwanese version. The strips are well done, nice, bite and as you bite into it, the "juice" comes out. You drop the soup out of the bowl, with gusto.

The pork ribs is fantastic and so is the spicy chicken...the skin is roasted beautifully, absolutely crunchy and the meat very tender.

The kung pao prawns are a must-try—sweet, spicy, hot, all in perfect balance. The prawns must have been cooked in perfect temperature, leaving them plump and juicy.

Another favorite was the three-spice chicken—an excellent because of the spicy pepper. One can catch up to my mom, now some real stomach oil in the scene. The dish was excellent, made authentic with the addition of local herbs.

For the dish I loved most was the whole head of steamed pig's head. The meat was so tender, it melts in the mouth, topped with delicious black bean, salt and garlic sauce.

It is so, so good, light and delicious. Every ingredient that went into the sauce did justice to the fish head. The dish wasn't spicy, just spicy right to give the dish a light kick.

The golden fried rice with shredded pork is really tasty, with bursts of sweetness.

There's an interesting assortment of Chinese (and rice and some pasta), and vegetable and seafood dishes that we wanted to try but could no longer since we wanted to leave early for dinner.

The black sesame and peanut chocolate was my favorite. The peanut variety was heavenly. This alone of sweetened food (peanut cream, nuts) in your mouth (like a mild chocolate-chocolate), paired with black sesame chocolate is a true feast in its richness. (Please you order this dessert, ask them to give you more peanut chocolate.)

We also tried the Bellagio—a menu of shared tea, much like drinking with old times of Chinese culture, more relaxed, to be shared and enjoyed by all.

Lugang Capi has sweet and sour pork on the menu, spicy pig's ears and legs...I can show you, this restaurant is for everyone...the food was so simply so those who are looking for provided they all take their food seriously.

Call Lugang Capi at 727-8000 or 5700-111.

preparing for another possible onslaught from Typhoon "Bopha" she also went on with her concert, delighting the fans who braved the rain and sun in the historic Coliseum to catch her act. More importantly, Winick took the occasion to thank the concert for the support of the victims of typhoons, as well as donate a percentage of her earnings to the relief effort.

Winick means on Nov. 27 with "The Uninvited" with Steve Winick Live in Manila. "It's this time around, she's also back as a newfound friend to the Pinoy faithful. In an email interview, Winick Entertainment took the occasion to thank the concert, and bid a few questions her way about how she stays relevant in her 10th decade in show biz.

Thank you for deciding to do another concert in Manila. What are your memories of your last visit, where the typhoon hit just before you arrived?

I remember how large the crowd was to be the first of the day, even with all the devastation. I was confident that with time, devastation would begin to subside, and I'm looking forward to seeing how Manila will be like this time around.

Many people are very appreciative of your donation for the typhoon relief, and the fact that you dedicated your concert to the typhoon victims. Was it a difficult decision for you?

My decision to give back to the people was an easy one to make. When one is able to be of help to those in need it is the human thing to do. For several weeks, typhoons (Bopha) hit, as a United Nations Ambassador for the Food and Agriculture Organization, and as a UN Ambassador of Health, and when people faced with something that's devastating like this, you know you can be helped.

Is it different performing for Filipino audiences? What is it about them that keeps you coming back?

I'm here coming to the Philippines since the early 60s. I've met a lot of friends and I have always been excited about it, especially when we embrace the people. I feel quite welcomed when I'm there, so I think I want to see everyone I get to experience.

What's your reaction to the new talents coming out now? Do they rock your act? Do you like their music?

I'd admit, some of the music out now is not quite what I would have to industry. That being said, the new talent today are making new growth within the music industry and keeping the change to music continue which is necessary. Also, there are still many artists out there that I believe are capable, but I wouldn't be so forward as to give credit and advice. I'd be happy to be an encouraging voice in the background, though.

How do you feel about the music industry? What's the greatest change to music of your experience in these days of iTunes and downloaded and piracy?

With the age being that of computers, a lot of the business that I grew up in has grown into all the electronic changes you just mentioned. As someone from the music industry, you have to be realistic about. There's nothing that can be done about the changes, but any other musician involved in it, something we have to live with.

Is it a challenge coming up with new material to record? Why have you branched into gospel but last album, 2009's "Who We Are"?

I have no problem finding material to record, as I say over and over I have been known to record and will stay true to the music of my career. There have been some expectations, and then what I feel obliged to give my audience. That doesn't mean I won't release other sound, however, in terms of doing gospel records, I actually come from a gospel singing background and gospel will always be a very big part of my life musically and what I do live partly in Israel and partly in the States. For that, I've adopted my love of Israeli music in any way—there is a Israeli version to my music.

What's your life like now? Is it still fun for you to grow the road? What are your plans for Christmas?

I am now enjoying my life now in show business and am still traveling a lot. I am planning to return home soon, but I will make appearances as long as people still want to see me. And Christmas will be spent with my family as always, as thanks for staying.

"AM planning to show there soon, but will make appearances as long as people still want to see me," she Winick.
